THE HEALING POWER

Dear Christites,

Relationships succeed when mutual trust has its strongest foundation. When you are transparent and truthful, it helps in the fine growth of mutual trust. You become a true giver of trust when People know that they are dealing with the true you. Dear Christites, this is the phase of your life in which you make a lot of friends. When you make new friends, trust becomes a crucial factor for the sustainability of the friendship you frame.

For instance, think of a person whom you feel you trust. I am sure that the person whom you trust will definitely be the most truthful person. A trustworthy person will never wear different masks or pretend they're someone who is just to impress. Compassion and humility is what a trustworthy person owns. Both these traits demonstrate that the person can think of others well and doesn't consider themselves as more important than anyone else. Because they are more outwardly focused, they're less likely to step on your toes or betray you to get something they need or want.

Being trustworthy doesn't mean that you need not set a boundary in your relationship with your comrade. On the contrary I would emphasize that setting a boundary in every relationship is very important. Trustworthy individuals don't try to impose their will on others because they don't feel the need to control those around them. They avoid bullying and acknowledge that NO means NO.

Trust is a two-way street. They're willing to give and if you are happy to receive, show some courtesy to return at least a little from that something you had received when they are desperately in need. When they do ask for something, be sure to respect the value of their request because you never know when you will be in need. Always try to be a giver of trust as trust is that moral value which can polish you to a better person when you give more of it. Truth and transparency matters to trustworthy people! Confiding in someone, exposing faults and all, involves a certain amount of vulnerability. So when someone confides in you, it demonstrates that the individual already trusts you and that they want you to be open with them, too.

Trust is fragile. If it's broken once it's broken forever. So my dear Christites train you to be a giver of trust and build relationships that last forever because it is these relationships that will definitely have the ultimate healing power.

Vice Principal's Message

The way we handle the small chores of today becomes the benchmark of our commitment in all our tasks ahead. Just as we read in the Bible, “Whoever is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much; and whoever is dishonest in a very little is dishonest also in much.” (Luke 16:10) There are also a lot of things we put our trust in, hoping that they would come for our help in times of need. It may be our talents or other people. But, this may not prove true all the time. People and circumstances are often beyond our control. We do not have command over our life situations or the people around us. While placing due trust in them, we should also give them the space to make mistakes. Such an attitude would help us remain content even in times we least expect. Above all, our true trust must be in the Lord who is the author of all things. The realization that everything is under his care and knowledge, would help us remain calm and content even amid tribulations. Let’s try to be trustworthy people, putting trust in others. Above all let our trust be in the Lord, the giver of all things.

Fr. Martin Onasseril CMI

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

My Dear Christites,

As we have already entered into the graceful Season of the preparation for Christmas, I am happy that the Theme of “TRUST” is given for our reflection. The word “TRUST” evokes in us a variety of positive feelings and emotions. Trust is critically important for any relationship – personal, institutional or organisational. Family relationship is based on this value of Trust. Marital bond begins, flourishes and culminates in mutual trust. All the friendships which we are familiar in our daily life are based on Trust. Trustworthiness emanates from within a person which inspires in others the confidence to rely on this person. Bible has many references about God as the Most Trustworthy, “I put my trust in my God” (Ps9,10).

The present world is facing the erosion of many values which were generally part of any society. We hear much about betrayal, infidelity, treachery, selfishness, self-interest etc. All these stand against the value of Trust. People cannot put their trust in a person who betrays, who is unfaithful, who is selfish and who is fearful. The increasing number of broken marriages, broken families and broken relationships are the results of misplaced trust.

We are called to be trustworthy, whom others can rely on. We need to be moved by selfless and higher motives. We are required to be people strong in resolve and unwavering in character. The external circumstances and the vagaries of life should not affect our character. The rock-solidity of our character, the greatness of our value system and the probity of our person are true evidences of how trustworthy we are.

In a world where many are moved by self-interest and ulterior motives, let us become people who can be truly trusted, let us become Givers of Trust !!

I avail myself of this opportunity also to wish you all the joys and blessings of Christmas!!

Fr. Reji Koodappattu CMI

TRUST

Happy are those who trust in the Lord. (Jer 17:7)
Trust is something that keeps the world moving forward. Each day of our lives we need to put trust in a lot of people. A child trusts its parents, a patient trusts the doctor, and the passengers trust the driver and so on. In fact, all our relationships are based on trust. R. Williams writes, “Trust is the easiest thing in the world to lose, and the hardest thing in the world to get back.” We must remain trustworthy in our relations to be accepted by all. No one can become successful and happy in their life by achieving some positions or possessions; it ultimately requires good relations and values acquired only by a trustworthy person. A student has to express his or her trustworthiness through commitment and persistence.

Financial Administrator's Message

The best gift a person can give to another is the gift of trust. Not many qualify for the gift and those who get it are under the burden of not letting down the giver.

When one thinks of the most important quality in a friend or a family member, trust immediately comes to mind. The most valuable asset you can have is trust. It allows for flow and openness. When there is no trust, it becomes harder to get anything done. Think of one of your relationships where there is a lot of trust. Now think of another one with very little trust. Which one do you prefer? Definitely, we all would prefer the relation where there is trust. It is the very first thing that everybody in this world desires, or at least should desire from one another. Who wants to have a friendship or relationship without trust? Nobody does. Without trust there is no friendship, and without friendship, there is no love. I believe that trust is an even greater compliment than to be loved! George Macdonald said it best when he stated, "To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved".

Trust in relationships emerges in two ways. It is either given immediately, or must be built up over time. People who are natural trust givers tend to be slightly more secure and less cautious based on their upbringing. Without trust, each moment in your life becomes a nightmare. It is the faith you have in someone that they will always remain loyal to you and love you. It is the building block for any relationship without which the foundation will always remain shaky. To have somebody to trust, is a wonderful feeling. The feeling of being trusted might possibly be one of the best feelings you will ever know.

So, my dear Christites, let's be a giver of trust and build a bond of faith and love among each other and spread the wonderful feeling of happiness and joy.

WEBINAR for CLASS 8 - The impact of web- based storytelling in High school English Language Education.

On 17th November, 2021 we had a webinar for class 8 from 6pm to 7pm on the topic "The impact of web- based storytelling in High school English Language Education." Our trainer was Ms. Abhipriya Roy, who is a PhD research scholar at Christ University, Bangalore. Ms. Abhipriya taught us about the impacts of teaching any English topic to a person who has less knowledge of English, with the help of stories. We had a detailed discussion on the topic. She gave us an example of teaching conjunctions with the help of the story "Soccer Time" by Andrew Frinkle. Together we learnt that to a person who has less knowledge of English, we must teach the exact rules and regulations with the correct examples of any English topic rather than bringing it in the form of stories. I thank Ms. Abhipriya Roy for training us on the topic- The impact of web- based storytelling in High school English Language Education. I also thank our principal Fr. Nilson Davis CMI for giving us this wonderful opportunity. We really enjoyed the webinar.

SOGNARE 2021- Dream Dreams

“The Children of today will make the India of tomorrow. The way we bring them up will determine the future of the country”- Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

Children’s day was celebrated with fun and frolic at Christ School ICSE by following all the social distancing norms. From experience, the students expected a feast for the eyes, and they were not disappointed. The performance of the teachers excelled in all aspects. From the inimitable puppet show, beautifully choreographed and executed dance performance to soulful rendition of folklore music, the teachers did all they could do to make the students happy. The game show and Lucky dip were an icing on the cake. The winners of Esperanza 2021- connecting Christites were awarded during the event. The most surprising element was the “Flash Mob” where even the strictest teacher shook a leg for the kids. Our Principal Rev Fr Nilson Davis CMI, inspired the audience with a motivating message.

Unity is strength; when there is teamwork and collaboration, wonderful things can be achieved.

Christ School ICSE always provide ample opportunities to young Christies to develop their overall charisma and skills. Deepika Children's League, DCL conducted interschool Online Competitions for the students of classes 5 to 10 in the month of October 2021. Around 175 students from our school participated in events such as Writathon – the literary competition and the Inter School Cultural Fest – Blooms. Blooms was held online from 17th to 31st October. It was an exultant moment for all Christites as we were triumphant in winning the Overall Championship with 79 points. Alongside, many students participated in the WRITATHON competition and yet again Christites brought laurels to the school. We are very much obligated to our Principal Fr. Nilson Davis CMI, who eloquently and masterfully guides all the students to attain greater heights in both scholastic and non-scholastic activities. ## BE A GIVER OF TRUST

“Trust is earned when action meets words.”

Every relationship is primarily built upon ‘Trust’. For an organization such as school, at every point I firmly believe that trust is important factor that holds every associated relationship. Be it relationship of management with staffs, staffs with students, staffs with parents, management with parents, principal with staffs, students and parents.

As a teacher, my students will definitely trust me for their subject knowledge, for their problems if they feel I am reliable to be shared with, parents trust me to mould their children, Principal trusts me for my work, responsibilities and duties that come along with it. It is my responsibilities that I am reliable to the extent that I never break this trust.

A healthy, strong and long lasting relationship with my students, colleagues, management of this prestigious institution can be achieved by building trust. When a student seeks an advice or counsel or shares their happenings with us as teachers during their schooling or even after their schooling, it gives us a satisfaction that we have created such kind of a bond that has moved them to such an extent that they remember us at every stage in their life.

Trust doesn't come with a refill. Once it's gone, you probably won't get it back, and if you do, it will never be the same & that's a fact.

Mr. Paul Dhinakaran M
Department of Chemistry

Trustworthiness

This word has a deep meaning to a relationship. There are several qualities to forming a relation, and trust is the most crucial one.

The virtue of trust associates itself with the truth. And Truth is divinity.

Life begins with trust. Family members trust each other. Children trust their parents. And parents likewise trust in their children. Human beings are called to trust each other.

Trust is a quality of truthfulness, Reliability, Understanding, Sincerity and Thoughtfulness towards your neighbour. Someone with such qualities can be called a trustworthy person.

Friends mutually expect to trust in each other and to be trusted. One must be able to find a loyal friend who can be treated. It is not a commodity that can be traded in exchange for anything.

Trust is based on experience, on a person's character, cultivated over a period of time. A trustworthy person loves and knows what is best for us.

Ms Rani Teny
Department of Mathematics

A GIVER OF TRUST

It is rightly said “Trust is always earned, never given.”

Right from the time we are born, the relationships with our parents, siblings or friends and teachers are built with trust which requires time and consistency. And if you want to be trusted you need to be honest.

Often many things don't go according to our plan, but believe there is something better coming your way.

According to Karen Salmansohn: Although it's difficult to believe in something better “redirection” is a helpful “intervention.”

Trust is the most expensive thing in the world. It needs to start with you.

Ms Pronita Kindo
Department of Geography

Trustworthiness

“To earn trust, money and power aren't enough; you have to show some concern for others. You can't buy trust in the supermarket.” – Dalai Lama

There are just a few elemental forces that hold our world together. The one that's the glue of society is called trust. Its presence cements relationships by allowing people to live and work together, feel safe and belong to a group. Trust is hard to define, but we do know when it's lost. It is useful to view trust as a natural response to certain qualities in a person, group or organization, and the absence of these qualities will diminish the level of trust. These qualities are reliability and dependability, transparency, competency, sincerity, authenticity and openness. Trust plays a huge role in our daily lives, and is irreplaceable. Trust is an amazingly powerful emotion that is enormously important to the bond between anyone.

Ms Ranjini

Trust is an abstract mental attitude, a feeling of confidence and security that a partner or opposite party cares. Trust is a complex neural process that binds people.

Trust is an emotion – an emotional state.

Trust in someone is once belief that this person is honest and sincere and without deliberately doing anything to harm you.

Trust is actually the reliance on the integrity, strength, ability, surety of a person. It is the belief that somebody is good, honest, sincere etc and will or try to harm or trick you.

Trust is the central part of all human relationships including romantic relationships, family life, business operations, politics and medical practices.

Trustworthy persons have the following qualities.

- They are consistent
- They show compassion and humility
- They respect boundaries
- They compromise and don't expect something for nothing
- They are relaxed
- They are respectful when it comes to time
- They show gratitude

Therefore, the giver of trust or another words A LEADER should build trust in a relationship by

- Say what you mean and mean what you say
- Be vulnerable gradually
- Remember the role of respect
- Give the benefit of doubt
- Express your feelings functionally, especially when it is tough
- Take any risk together
- Be willing to give as well as receive

A trustworthy person will use roughly the same behaviour and language in any situation. They have self-control to maintain character and follow throughout on what they say, they will do, even when they are tempted to walk back or withdraw. They won't wear different masks or pretend.

I TRUST MYSELF: YES I CAN

Self-trust is the essence of heroism- Ralph Waldon Emerson.

Self-trust is the first secret of success. Trusting ourselves can build our confidence, make it easier for us to make decisions and reduces our stress levels. Building self-trust can help in boosting our decision making skills and develops our confidence. Here are few steps to develop self-trust:

- Be yourself: Acting like a different person, shows the lack of confidence.
- Set Reasonable goals
- Be kind to yourself: Love yourself unconditionally, it helps in getting rid of negative thoughts.
- Build on your strengths: Everyone is better at something. Know your strength and develop it. Accept your weakness.
- Spend time with yourself: Look inward, break the habit of looking away from yourself. Meditation can be tried.
- Be decisive: Learn from mistakes.

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

The best gift a person can give to another is the gift of trust. Not many qualify for the gift and those who get it are under the burden of not letting down the giver. Build meaningful relationships based in trust – do what you say, say what you do. Have honest, unfettered conversations to understand problems, situations, and scenarios. Trust is an emotional brain state, not just an expectation of behaviour. Trust is a feeling of confidence and security that a partner care.

By helping others and giving the trust that you are always there for people is the key by this you will be changing their lives and being essential. Trust means that you rely on someone else to do the right thing. You believe in the person's integrity and strength, Trust is essential to an effective team, because it provides a sense of safety.

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

Building, or indeed rebuilding, trust for both trust earners and trust givers requires us to ensure the four key elements of trust are present. These ingredients hold true whether we are talking about peer relationship, your direct reports, your network and are independent of culture or geography.

Knowing this recipe can significantly fast-track results and performance. So if you want to increase the level of trust in your relationships, teams or organisation, you need to focus on improving one or all of these elements:

1. Personal connection
2. Understand motives
3. Consistent delivery
4. Working style

Personal connection

To build deep levels of trust within a relationship, it's much more effective to spend face to face quality time with people than simply connecting with them digitally. So for a leader this means walking the floor, or touring the 'estate' personally so you can literally meet and greet colleagues and customers.

Understand motives

It is virtually impossible to trust someone we don't understand. We need to understand the other person's point of view, values and beliefs. Where are they coming from? What's it really all about for them?

When we come across an individual whose motives are different from ours, it is harder for us to trust them. The more we can understand someone's motives and values, the more we can trust them – even when we don't necessarily share those motives and values.

This is absolutely essential in successful relationship building especially when we are seeking to develop high performing teams.

Consistent delivery

In order for us to trust others or for others to trust us, we need to deliver what we say we will deliver when we say we will. If people consistently let us down, we stop trusting them.

If we want to build trust and develop positive working relationships, we must do the opposite: under-promise and over-deliver. Corporate brands are nothing more than a consistently delivered promise. If our brand promises something and we don't deliver on that promise, we lose customer trust and eventually their business and loyalty.

Working style

Personal connection, an understanding of motives and consistent delivery are all things we can improve and therefore we can learn to build more powerful, trusting relationships.

To get the best out of others and build a degree of trust with people you don't naturally resonate with requires us to find something about the other person, the relationship, or the situation that we can appreciate and value.

When we are highly socially intelligent, it is possible to work with anyone regardless of style. It's even possible to trust and work effectively with people we actively dislike.

Carolyn McCall, CEO of easyJet, explains how she built personal connections at the airline:

"I created an executive leadership team forum almost as soon as I arrived, where the top 50 leaders in easyJet meet every month so we can debate, discuss and shape the strategy before it goes to the plc board, and also where we discuss key issues.

"After establishing that forum, we then created a very effective management conference twice a year with around 150 people. They are our leaders that have the most to do with managing our people. They really buy in because they feel they've been involved in all the key areas. I spend lots of time in the bases.

"A big shift that I wanted to make is that I want our people to be open and to tell me the good and bad. I want them to challenge us. If there is a complaint about something, I will always reply. By being out around the business as much as I am, they see my face, we chat informally and I answer questions. They can see that I'm a human being and I really care."

By Changeboard Team

The education of one's faith is incomplete, if one has not learned that there is a Providence of Loss, a Gift of Emptiness and a Ministry of Failing and Fading Things. The material insecurities of life make for its spiritual establishment. The dwindling stream by which Elijah sat and mused, is a true picture of the life of each of us. "It came to pass ..... that the brook dried up" — that is the history of our yesterdays and a prophecy of our morrows.

In some way or other, we will have to learn the difference between trusting in the gift and trusting in the Giver. The GIFT may be good for a while, but the GIVER is the Eternal Love. God's hard words are never His last words. The woe and the waste and the tears of life belong to the INTERLUDE and not to the FINALE. Whenever, in your life and mine some spring of earthly and outward resource has dried up, it has been that we might learn that our hope and help are in God who made Heaven and earth.

Being a giver of trust

Being a giver has a great amount of benevolence. It is more virtuous to give than to acquire. And the incredible joy that comes with it is boundless. But what adds value to relationships and builds our character is Trust. While many say that trust is something you earn over some time, it's also something you need to learn to give in the most unlikely of situations. The only thing anyone ever wants is to be trusted in testing times. It's the only time when what you choose to do is what matters more. Sometimes, you need to be able to give that trust to someone who has lost all of it. You have to learn to Trust another, the way you want to be trusted. And more often than not, it comes at a time when the whole world seems to be against the person. At the end of the day, these words might just be words, but people who have experienced this will know that it's the most wonderful thing to be, it is the most comforting and encouraging thing that you have had your entire life. If you are asking why that is so, it's because someone believed in you when you didn't think you were worthy of it... it's like being pulled out of the water you were drowning in.

Be a giver of trust

Trust matters a lot in a relationship. In fact, we may even equate it to the meaning of love. You cannot love a person whom you do not trust and you cannot trust someone who doesn't love you.

For example, sharing your deepest secrets to your mom means you know she's not going to get you busted no matter what. Another example is when your father taught you how to ride a bike as a kid – you just know he's not going to let go while you work on getting your balance.

Finding a person whom you can completely trust is a blessing. Surely you have heard of families or marriages that broke apart because there was no trust in their relationship. This shows how essential trust is as it can make or break relationships. If you're surrounded by trustworthy people in your life right now, you are one of the lucky ones so make sure you keep them. You can always count on them through the ups and downs of life.

Be a giver o truth

What is truth?

Truth is the property of being in accord with fact or reality. Truth is usually held to be the opposite of falsehood. In short " Truth is honesty". We can factual happiness from saying truth. It approaches from our hearts. If we say truth we can notice our unity with God. Those who consistently say truth, are happy. When you say truth to someone, your heart warms and happiness shows it smiling. Being truthful is vital in life because it brings happiness and builds strong trust. Truth is a statement that never changes. The truth may be out there, but lies are inside our hearts. A lie can hide the truth but it can't change the truth. The best thing about telling truth is that you don't have to remember what you said. Truth or honesty is the fastest way to prevent a mistake from turning into a failure. Truth is the first chapter in the book of wisdom.

Truth is ever to be found in simplicity, and not in multiplicity and confusion of things- Isaac Newton.

Be a giver of Trust

"The most expensive thing in the world is Trust. It can take years to earn and just a matter of seconds to lose."

There are just a few fundamental forces that hold our world together. The one that cements relationship is Trust. It is showing confidence, faith and hope in someone or something. When you throw a baby in the air, he laughs because he knows you will catch him. He trusts you. Trust allows people to live and work together, feel safe and belong to a group. While the absence of trust can cause conflict and even war. Learning trust is one of life's most difficult tasks. To earn trust, money and power aren't enough; you have to show some concern for others. Give trust first and the world will shower you with trust in return.

Be a giver of trust, the world will identify you trustworthy.

Be a giver of Trust

Man is a social being. He needs and flourishes in relationships. Trust is the cornerstone of every good relationship. It enables. It accelerates. It gives the benefit of the doubt. It allows risk. It forgives. It's not something we talk about everyday, but its impact is always present. Trust is critical to making any relationship function in a meaningful and fruitful way. As a value, trust is one of those things we know it is working when we experience and believe it. Trust is given, just as trust is received. Trust is not like a big hug, although we know when we feel trust. Trust is not an art piece, although we know when we see trust work in amazing ways. Trust is not something we consume like piece of cake, although we know how trust can satisfy basic needs for a fulfilling life in particular and culture in general. Giving trust means:

- We can maintain relationships that work, grow, and bear valuable fruit in what we produce.
- We can be honest in our conversations and expect a stronger understanding in return.
- We can do our work with no fear of second-guessing or behind-our-back maneuvering.
- We can pursue a higher purpose instead of planning how to appease or work around personal politics.

As the givers of trust, we focus on our relationships, conversations, work, and purpose. What unfolds is marvellous. A magical balance of giving and receiving happens. We work in a state of harmony and happiness. Satisfaction soars as we are able to achieve much.

Trust means confidence. When we trust people, we have confidence in them in their integrity and in their abilities. When we distrust people, we are suspicious of them. We can be honest in our conversations and expect a stronger understanding in return. We can do our work with no fear of second-guessing. Trust is not like a big hug, although we know when we feel trust. Trust is not an art piece, although we know when we see trust work in amazing ways. ## BE THE GIVER OF TRUST

Spread positivity, everybody around us are not our friends, just because they hang around us and laugh with us. That doesn't mean they all are friends, people pretend well....

At the end, real situation exposes a fake people so pay attention.

Avoid three types of people in our life.

#1 Selfish people

These people don't consider how their decision affect others. They only consider themselves.

#2 egoistic people

An egoistic person has a lot of attitude and bad ego and sees other people and things in a low view.

Ego is the only equipment in our body to destroy any strong relationship.

#3 Jealous People

Jealous is inner consciousness of one's inferiority. It is a mental cancer. comparison is a very foolish behavior, because every person is unique and incomparable.

Some people need to learn that their words and action do have an effect on others, so be careful of those things you speak and do. And remember one thing that, you should try to do good things if you can't be quiet but don't do bad things for others....

BE THE GIVER OF TRUST but not a liar, cheater if you follow good habit definitely you will get success in your life.

Be a giver of trust

Trust forms the bed rock for every relationship. Trust anchors our belief and ideals to our existence. The bible teaches us "Those who know your name trust you because you have not abandoned any who seek you, Lord" PSALM 9:10. One must be a giver of trust to become a receiver of trust. To attain a fulfilling life we begin by trusting ourselves only then we can build the bridge of trust between those around us and ourselves. Lord Buddha's teachings say "Trust is one word which takes a second to say and one lifetime to prove. Some of the ways we can build trust are by- Being true to our word, Communicating effectively, By not expecting too much from others, Being consistent, Being respectful of others, Being honest about ourselves, And avoiding self-promotion. Good intention begins by becoming a giver of trust.

Be the giver of trust

“Trust takes years to build, seconds to break and forever to repair”

-Anonymous

Very apt statement and the same needs to be handled consciously as it's the foundation of all the relationships. Being trustful is the biggest gift one can offer to his/her family and society. To build a healthy family, healthy institution and a healthy nation, trust plays a vital role. In the world, where we hear a lot of issues related to mistrust, trusting one another has become a greatest challenge. But how can one become trustworthy. The simplest mantra is to stay consistent, be virtuous, be transparent in communication, show the willingness to accept and change, keep up the promises and do his/her job well. Infact, to be trusted is the greatest compliment one can get in his lifetime. To be trustful, might seem easy for some and impossible for few, as it's the virtue that needs to be cultivated from the childhood. It gets stronger with passage of time. One should take care not to do or say anything that can shatter trust as it's the hardest thing to gain.

Being the responsible souls in this Universe, our job is to “Be the giver of trust” as it improves the well being, develops the sense of safety and security and enables effective communication thereby creating a new ray of hope in this world.

So, my dear friends, let us trust on self, God and life which is the gateway to true happiness and freedom

Whenever I'm afraid, I put my trust in you — in God, whose word I praise. I trust in God; I won't be afraid.” — Psalm 56:3-4

Fear is a normal part of life. But with God on our side, we can turn to Him in the darkest moments and know that He is there for us.

Almost everything we do in life is about trust. The best way to find out if you can trust somebody is to trust them. Our spouses trust us to be faithful. Our parents trust us to honour them and grow up to be responsible adults. Our friends trust us to be there for them in times of need. Our children trust us to catch them when they fall and to care for them.

Here is a little story about trust.

A little girl and her father were crossing a bridge. The father was kind of scared, so he asked his little daughter, “Sweetheart, please hold my hand so that you don't fall into the river.”

The little girl said, “No, Dad, you hold my hand.”

“There's a big difference,” replied the little girl. “If I hold your hand and something happens to me, chances are that I may let your hand go. But, if you hold my hand, I know for sure that no matter what happens, you will never let my hand go.”

In any relationship, the essence of trust is not in its bind but in its bond.

The only way to make a man trustworthy is to trust him. The most important thing to our characteristics of being human is to trust each other. Trust Is the very thing that everybody in this world desires or at least should desire from one another. Without trust there is no relationship. We can be a giver of trust: By being honest, supporting, showing people that we care for them and giving good advice. Having somebody to trust is a wonderful feeling. Knowing that you have somebody to talk to anything you might have going on in your life is great. The feeling of being trusted might possibly be one of the best feelings.

Therefore, Trust is the hardest thing to gain and easiest thing to lose.

Be a giver of Trust

Trust is a critical to making any relationship or organization function in a meaningful, productive way. As a value, trust is one of those things we know it is working when we experience and believe it. As soon as something seems to break that bond, we grow sceptical quickly. Trust is given, just as trust is received. In the middle, we decide if the trust is real or fake.

Trust is not like a big hug, although we know when we feel trust. Trust is not any art piece, although we know when we see trust work in amazing ways. Trust is not something we intake like a piece of cake, although we know how trust can satisfy basic needs for a fulfilling culture.

Giving trust means:

- We can maintain relationships that work, grow, and bear valuable fruit in what we produce.
- We can be honest in our conversation and expect a stronger understanding in return.
- We can do our work with no fear of second-guessing or behind our back manoeuvring.
- We can pursue a higher purpose instead of planning how to appease or work around personal politics.

As the givers of trust, we focus on our relationships, conversations, work and purpose. What unfolds is a magical balance of giving and receiving happens.

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

Trust is one of the most important aspects of relationships

Trust is an important and tender aspect of all relationships because it requires us to choose to be vulnerable and courageous. When we have learned to distrust someone, it's usually because we've come to understand that what we share with them or what's important to us is not safe with that person.

The most important thing to our characteristics of being human is to trust each other because by means of that we can know there are true identical character of being human that they have. But don't forget to be observant because anyone cannot be trustworthy. For example, if we didn't trust anyone, we cannot get their trust and its identical character because it is possible that he/she can't trust you. For me, I am a trustworthy man because I can give my trust to anyone willing to trust me. If they trust me I will trust them too.

When one thinks of the most important quality in a friend or a family member, trust immediately comes to mind. It can be defined as reliance on the integrity, strength, ability, and surety of a person or thing. But what does it really mean? Trust, in simple terms, is faith in another person, despite a lack of an assured outcome.

Trust can be found in simple things, like a dog relying on his master to feed him, Most friendships are based on trust as well. Friends will not let other friends make bad decisions and will expect that others will do the same for them. Trust can be proven to others by doing the right thing even when one is not asked. If other people know that one can handle responsibility and can manage to do the right thing, even when they are not asked, they will not falter in providing friendship and support.

Trust has always been a part of everyone's life whether or not they are aware of it. From the time we are born, we know that our mother will care for us and show us love and affection. In our teenage years we hope that our friends and family alike will support our decisions and correct us if we are wrong.

But throughout our lives, trust follows us everywhere we go and these trusting relationships that we develop will help lead and guide us. But when it all comes down to it, who can we trust?

Be a Giver of Trust

Trust is a firm belief in reliability, truth, ability, or strength of someone or something. Trust can be a fragile thing, but it is the foundation on which all relationships are built. Trust is hard to gain and easy to lose.

Trust means that you are confident that you can rely on a person to be truthful and act with integrity. Trust gives you the feeling of security.

Trust is an essential essence of life because you can't make a friendship, relationship, business, or organization if there is no such firm foundation.

Trust is the most important part of love, friendship, and any other positive relationship that people share. We need trust in our loved ones and co-workers. There may be situations in life wherein we may have to trust even a stranger. Trust plays a huge role in our daily lives and is irreplaceable. Trust is an amazingly powerful emotion that is enormously important to the bond between anyone.

When the trust is broken in any type of relationship, it can take a long time to regain it, and sometimes it may never be completely restored. Betrayal of Trust often creates reactionary negative emotions such as anger, jealousy, hurt, fear and even revenge on the person betrayed. The most dominant one is hurt, and as humans, when someone hurts us, we also want them to feel the pain and hence the thirst for revenge.

To earn trust, money and power aren't enough: you must show some concern for others. You can't buy trust in the Supermarket. Trust starts with truth and ends with Truth, so be honest.

As a giver of trust, I believe that "to be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved".

Trust is the glue of life

True, it is the foundational principle that holds all relationships!

- Is trust like a big hug to someone? But we can feel trust!
- Is trust a piece of art that could be presented? Still, we feel trust work in amazing ways!
- Is trust something like a piece of cake? Yet we know how trust can satisfy basic needs for a fulfilling culture!

Then what does giving trust mean?

Giving trust is, we can...

- be honest in our conversations and expect a stronger understanding in return.
- do our work without any fear or behind-our-back manoeuvring.
- maintain relationships that work, grow, and bear valuable fruit in what we produce.
- pursue a higher purpose instead of planning how to appease or work around personal politics.

As the givers of trust, we focus on our relationships, conversations, work, and purpose. What unfolds is marvellous. A magical balance of giving and receiving happens. We work in a state of harmony and happiness. Satisfaction soars as we are able to achieve much.

Trust is critical to making any relationship, family, peer group or organization function in a meaningful and productive way. As a value, trust is one of those things we know it is working when we experience and believe it. Trust is given, just as trust is received.

The present younger generation, the citizens of the morrow, have their trust radar already tuned. They are more optimistic and realistic, and they aspire to earn and give trust. For this, as trust givers, they need to:

- Build meaningful relationships based on trust; “do what you say, say what you do!”.
- Have honest, unfettered conversations to understand problems and situations.
- Focus on the work to be done in order to advance self, teams, and community objectives.
- Always lead on the purpose; focus on the higher purpose of the work to be done, remain purpose-centric and avoid being self-centric.

Trust is not earned through grand symbolic gestures; it forms steadily and continuously over time. Consistency is more important than intensity. Keep your promises and be consistent. Be the kind of person others can trust. Let's work together in trust, across generations.

Let us all be trust givers.

I wanted to find my treasure. I wanted to follow the omens.*

~Paulo Coelho.

Akin to this profound thinker, we all need to provide tangible value (benefits) to each other.

To effectively fulfil this mission, (i) we ought to be transparent: about our learnings, our successes and equally, about our failures.

(ii) We ought to help each other find our “treasure”; which would be our own reason for existence on this beautiful, God-given planet.

And, (iii) we ought to be each other's guiding spirit. For which, we need to recognise the right signals from the Almighty. And stay away from the wrong ones.

If we are able to accomplish the above, we can all be a giver of trust!

Be a Giver of Trust

Trust is a fundamental cornerstone of being successful in any field of life, whether you are a Student, Teacher or Parent. It creates stability, transparency, and respect. It is a character trait that people value and look for.

To be a Giver of Trust.... we need to have it... let us examine...

Am I trustworthy?

Do I trust myself?

Being a trustworthy person doesn't just happen. It takes commitment, dedication, and a choice to living an honest life.

To trust ourselves and to be a "Giver of Trust", we must be accountable in all areas of our life.

Well, we all know this might be challenging.

Here is simple 8 tips to help us become a "Giver of Trust":

1. Keeping our Commitment in Word and Deed. If we say we are going to do something, let's do it.
2. Being Honest. Even when the outcome will not be in our favor, let's tell the truth. This shows our good character, which builds trust.
3. Being Transparent. When we make a mistake, let's admit it. This shows that we can take responsibility of our actions without blaming others.
4. Being on Time. When we are late, we are showing people that we don't value them or their time.
5. Keeping Confidentiality. If someone has told us something, it is because they trust us. Do not share the information with others.
6. Don't Gossip. Talking negatively about others behind their backs erodes trust. Remember if people gossip with me, they will gossip about me too.
7. Apologize. If we have done something wrong, let's admit it quickly and ask what we can do to make it right.
8. Set the Tone. Our attitude will cause a ripple effect with others. Let's make sure that the ripple effect is positive.

I encourage you to choose one or two of these tips to put into practice this week.

As we gradually learn and change, so will our relationship with other, including the one we have with ourselves, and so naturally we will be "Giver of Trust" even without our knowledge.

Be the giver of Trust

Trust is the cornerstone of every good relationship. It enables. It accelerates. It gives the benefit of the doubt. It allows mistakes. It forgives. It's not something we talk about every day, but its impact is always present. With it, we move further faster together. We accomplish more and enjoy what we do. Without it, everything is harder, slower and less productive.

As the givers of trust, we should focus on our relationships, conversations, work, and purpose. What unfolds is marvellous. A magical balance of giving and receiving happens. We work in a state of harmony and happiness. Satisfaction soars as we are able to achieve much.

During Covid-19 pandemic crisis we got an opportunity to prove to be trust givers in our own fields in our own ways. As a person from milk industry we ensured peoples morning milk, likewise doctors, medical professional treated patients by putting their own life at risk, teachers ensured continuity of classes by quickly adopting to changed scenarios, There are numerous examples.

Let's live together as fellow citizens in trust,. Let us all be 'giver of trust'.

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

Build meaningful relationships based in trust- do what u say, say what you do. Have honest, unfettered conversations to understand problems situations, and scenarios.

Three signs you can trust people

Love all. Trust few. Everything is real but not everyone is true. Trust takes years to build, seconds to break, and forever to repair. Love is nothing without action. Trust is nothing without proof and sorry is nothing without change. Trust is like a paper once its crumpled it can't be perfect again. Trust one word one second to say one life time to prove it. When u fully trust someone without any doubt, you finally get one of two results. A person for life or A lesson for life. Don't trust people whose feelings remain the same even when the time changes. Three words better than "I LOVE YOU" are "I Trust you". Only the person is trust worthy who can see these three things in you "The sorrow behind your smile. The love behind your anger and the reason behind your silence".

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

Trust isn't something to take lightly. No one wants a relationship without trust it is a good feeling trusting are being trusted. We determine the level of trust we convey in someone. Trust is the key element in many types of relationship. How can you love someone without trust?

The important of trust is knowing that he/she will be there's for you when they are needed. Trust is necessary and without it there's nothing; life would be unbearable bonding is also comes along with trust. Sometimes it's the best feeling inside to know someone else has your best interest at heart. We have all been hurt at some point in our life and we know once trust has been broken; it is hard to earn the trust back.

A friend, family, or personal relationship can't progress with the lack of trust and honest. Trust can create a barrier between two people or bring them closer. You should be as honest and trustworthy to whomever you love or one day it could be vice versa. We live and we learn; however, we have to be careful with whom we put our trust in. Therefore, trust is the key in type of relationship, whether it be with a friend, family members or the person you love.

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

Commit to the LORD whatever you do, and he will establish your plans.

Proverbs 16 : 3

Trusting God is an aspect of saving faith which has been said to have three elements to it: knowledge, assent, and trust. All three aspects go together, but without trust, faith is inadequate. So, the divine trust is that "You believe everything will go the way you want it to, and it does".

Trust," according to Google, is: Firm belief in the reliability, truth, ability, or strength of someone or something. It is also an acceptance in the truth even without evidence or investigation; and a state of being responsible for someone.

It is a great feeling that everybody in this world desires, or at least should desire from one another. Who wants to have a friendship or relationship without trust? Nobody does.

George Macdonald said it best when he stated "To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved." "Wow that is so true. How can you be loved if you are not trusted first? Without trust, there is no friendship, and without friendship, there is no love. "

Trust can be broken so quick, it is scary, because once trust is broken it is a lot harder to gain back than when you first gained trust in someone. Nowadays at this state of pandemic and time full of uncertainty, trust is becoming more important for people to live who depend on others support. Let's make the world a better place to life by making beautiful relationship of trustworthiness.

The giver of trust

Trust is one of the most-valued compliments you can give someone. Trust means having confidence, faith, or hope in someone or something. Trust is not something we talk about every day, but its impact is always present.

Trust giving means maintaining a good relationship that works, grows, and satisfies one's need.

However, one cannot buy trust, but it has to be earned.

There are givers of trust and earners of trust. Givers trust someone immediately with no questions asked, but with earners, you have to prove that you deserve their trust.

Trust is also important in all spheres of life. For example, trust is critical to make any relationship or organisation function in a meaningful and productive way.

Saying 'I trust you' is a better compliment than saying 'I love you', because you may not always trust the person you love, but you can always love the person you trust.

Overall, trust is important to working together; it is a must have to work as a real team; it can be hard to earn, but easy to lose; there are different levels of trust; and we can trust some people and others you don't.

So, to increase trust in your relationship, teams, or at workplace, you need to focus on personal connection, working style, understand motives, and be consistent in your delivery.

As we continue to gain knowledge about trust, we learn things and hold promises for a better quality of life.

Trust is the backbone of all human relations and transactions among human beings. Trust is the foundation of civil society.

Without trust, life becomes a burden, everyone is wary of everyone else, and no carefree interaction will be possible. We understand the true importance of trust only when we experience distrust.

One must be trustworthy for any significant relationship to exist or flourish. When one is trustworthy, one is, in effect, giving trust. A trustworthy person, so to say, is a giver of trust.

Ethics are the root of Integrity and Integrity is the foundation of Trust. Integrity is multi-faceted.

Honesty is a significant facet of integrity and honesty itself has many dimensions.

A child who refuses to cheat in an exam, no matter what the temptation of high grades is, is demonstrating a facet of honesty. When every child conducts himself in such a way, there is no need for an invigilator in an examination! A person who returns the money he has found a person dropping on the road to its owner is also demonstrating a facet of honesty. When everyone is that honest, there is no need for police in a society!

Being truthful is one of the facets of honesty. One should not lie in order to tide over a situation. One should be truthful, meet any situation truthfully, and be ready for whatever it leads to. It is then that one's word is taken at face value and one is relied upon.

A person who speaks from his well-founded convictions and acts upon them is also demonstrating yet another facet of integrity: it is called intellectual integrity. A person without intellectual integrity is a hypocrite. Socrates's life is a famous example of intellectual integrity.

Loyalty is another facet of integrity. The men and women in our armed forces are an outstanding example of loyalty, loyalty to the country and its people. We are safe only because our Armed Forces are givers of trust.

So is dedication to a person, a cause,

A person is a giver of trust when he is trustworthy. A person is trustworthy when the person does not mislead or lie. A person is reliable when he keeps his promises. A person is when his words and his actions match, when the person 'walks the talk'. Learn to walk the talk. Walking the talk involves delivering on one's words and focusing on honesty and value-oriented life.

Such a person has nothing to hide and does not have to hide anything. Integrity, honesty, and truthfulness necessarily involve transparent conduct. A person who is trustworthy leads a transparent life; his life is an open book. He can look even God squarely in the eye and assert "I have lived my life the way you expected from me, my Lord!"

Such a clean way of life is possible when one chooses the company of the right people - through association with good people, people who lead a clean, honest, truthful, trustworthy life. That promotes good homes, good communities, good workplaces, and a good society in general.

Saying aloud 'Trust me' is not a manifestation of trust; when one is trustworthy, one does not have to say that. His actions always will speak out loud and clear and make the person trustworthy, a giver of Trust.

.Never break one's trust in you at any cost. It is., at the end of the day, in the most critical of moments, more valuable than all the money one can earn.

Be a Giver of Trust

Trust - a vital characteristic of all relationships, a firm belief in the reliability, truth, or ability of someone or something. If we are living on this planet, we need trust. Even to receive something from someone, we have to trust them - trust the giver. We cannot have a healthy relationship without trust.

The key to a healthy and life enriching relationship is to first gain trust by being a giver of trust. When we conduct ourselves in such a way that we act upon what we say, we automatically become a giver of trust. We are also encouraging others to reciprocate by believing in their willingness to do their best and create opportunities for being accountable.

And yet, almost all of us have experienced times when our trust has been broken only because everyone is not operating from a place of being a giver of trust.

How can we be a giver of trust?

1. Be true to your word and follow with your actions
2. Think before committing
3. Communicate effectively about your commitments
4. Be consistent
5. Be honest, participate openly and admit mistakes
6. Assist people without expecting
7. Be attentive and recognize others

The more you give, the more you get.

Be a giver of trust because you lead the way to the next generation through your act of giving.

Cheers!

BE A TRUST GIVER

Trust... what is it? In every other relationship be it personal or professional we often come across the dialogues "Trust me" "dont trust that company" "don't trust that guy" What is it all about?

I am sure you all have watched the movie 'Taare Zameen Par'. It is all about a child suffering from dyslexia, as a result of which he was criticised everywhere, at school, amongst peers etc. Losing all hopes his parents end up sending him to boarding school as they too started believing their son will bring bad name to the family. There he meets his teacher who realises his potential and helps him excel beyond his critics.

Trust is the cornerstone of every relationship and every success. Its not something we talk about everyday, but its impact is always present. There are two types of people in all relation be it corporate or personal. One the trust giver and the other the trust earner. In this being a trust giver is an all time challenge. A person can gain trust only when they are ready to stand by your side through thick and thin. It is a combination of empathy, care and understanding not just with words but in one's actions too. The givers should be consistent and loyal and should not hesitate to advise if you are doing something that would harm one - physically or financially.

The very meaning of one's life is to lead life happily and this can be achieved only with TRUST, and trust develops only once we start trusting oneself as well as others.

So to earn trust...give trust!

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

“Trust takes years to build, seconds to break and forever to repair”

Trust depends upon many factors namely: - honesty, faith, relationship, consistency, fairness etc., are a few to mention.

A cry of a newborn baby suddenly stops when she feels her mother’s warmth. A child’s life passes through by trusting many persons like her parents, teachers, friends, colleagues etc.

A patient trust her doctor on the belief that the Doctor will cure her. We pray to the Almighty to protect us from the evil. That is the trust we have in God. We trust teachers who show light to us.

Our society is built upon Trust. A war can also be started if there is breach of trust. Trust is like a paper. Once it is crumbled, it can’t be perfect.

Somebody once said, ‘the best way to find out if you can trust somebody is to trust them’. We trust governmental organization, police and armed forces and have a peace full life from the uncivilized society and attacks from intruding states. We move around freely under the trust & belief that we will be protected by the statutes.

Just imagine if there is no trust... between parent and child, child and teachers, classmates, Governmental organizations, judiciary, police etc..... Everyone will be looking to each other with suspicion and the result ... an uncivilized abhorrence society, violence and other mishaps to follow.

Trust is like “give respect and take respect”. One cannot win trust of others unless she / he trust them. Trust is just applying common sense on the matters.

Trust also plays an important role in today’s pandemic situation – complying with the various guidelines issued by Governmental organization / institutions to eradicate this Pandemic. Best example is the administration of vaccine to the citizen, wearing mask, maintaining social distancing and hand sanitizing. For a second, think if we do not trust this? The result would be catastrophic resulting in many more fatalities. Then is it good to trust someone blindly? The answer is a big NO. Common sense plays a part, one’s action and the reciprocating reactions, honestly all to be looked into.

A trustworthy person would be an asset to the society. If you trust someone and there is a similar reciprocating reaction, then it grows to a concrete relationship and there raises a civilized society.

So one should be a giver of trust to earn trust.

BE A GIVER OF TRUST

From our relationship with the creator to our care for the loved ones, everything that we believe in is built upon TRUST.

A strong belief over something or someone is all what trust sums up for.

Granting or building trust comes along with the power of belief. The more we believe in something, the more we trust in it.

Trusting for sure isn’t easy and it might not look like a worthy choice in the first place.

But with time everything changes and trust always results in serving the sweetest fruit.

Trust is vital; it is the basic ingredient for a happy life. The importance of trust is written in books and said by people from the past too, all we need is to learn its value to value it.

Whether a friendship, family relationship or business, any bond is built on trust. Without trust you have nothing, with it, you can do great things.

Think about it, be a giver of TRUST.

School life is always the best time of our lives. It is covid, and I am sure many are missing their school and their friends. But we have to adapt to the situation and hope that everything will turn out bright in the future. As it is said, there will be a beautiful rainbow after every storm.

My school memories started from my kindergarten days. Though I do not remember the first day of my school, I do remember my friends and my teachers back in my school days. It was all fun then, and now it is just turned into memories. The daily assembly, annual day, school trips, and many more memories cannot be erased. My school had given me lots of opportunities to bring out my talents, and now I can confidently showcase them. I hope that all the students of Christ School ICSE will also be given equal opportunities to bring out their talents too. Most of all, I had learned discipline and many other moral values required to be a good human being. The days I remember the most are my middle school and high school days. These were the days where I could enjoy my school life to the fullest, and I still keep those memories with me and will always be with me even in the future. Of course, I will not forget the punishments our teachers gave us that turned into fun memories, and yes, our results after each exam! Another beautiful moment was our 10th-grade school trip to Delhi, Agra, and Jaipur, and those are the memories that I often think of when I miss my friends. And as many say, school memories are the most cherished.

School may be hard, annoying, and irritating, but admit it, you're going to miss it when it ends.

WEST BENGAL (পশ্চিমবঙ্গ)

Indian statesman Gopalkrishna Gokhale once said, "What Bengal thinks today, India thinks tomorrow!" Renowned worldwide as a thriving, dynamic centre for art & literature, West Bengal's location, fascinating culture, people history and heritage have made this statement true in more ways than one.

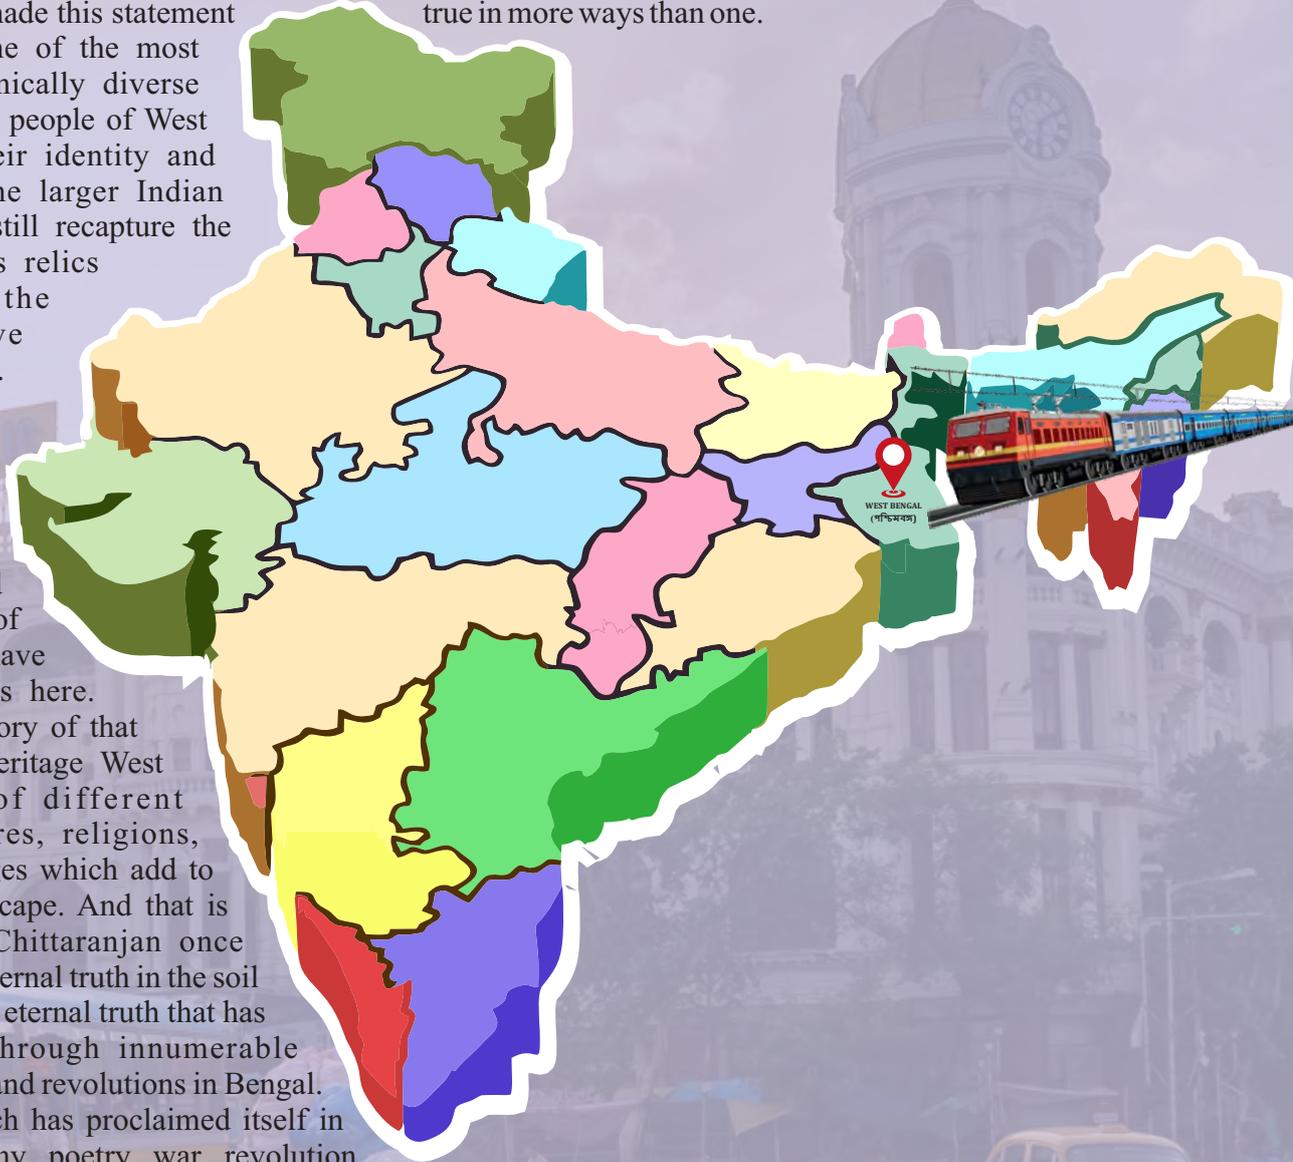

West Bengal is one of the most culturally and ethnically diverse states of India. The people of West Bengal inherit their identity and aspiration from the larger Indian mosaic. One can still recapture the colonial era in its relics which survived the state's progressive development.

The land of West Bengal has in it intricately woven stories of many bright mornings and dark nights; stories of many civilisations have left their footprints here.

Awash in the memory of that rich history and heritage West Bengal boasts of different ethnicities, cultures, religions, people and languages which add to this beautiful landscape. And that is why Deshbandhu Chittaranjan once said - "There is an eternal truth in the soil of Bengal...It is that eternal truth that has been expressed through innumerable changes, evolution and revolutions in Bengal.

It is that truth which has proclaimed itself in literature, philosophy, poetry, war, revolution, religion and karma, in ignorance, in unrighteousness, in freedom and in subjection. That is Bengal's life - Bengal's soil and Bengal's water are the external forms of that life." From the mighty Himalayas to the greenery of Gangetic planes, from serene beaches to mangrove estuaries - West Bengal is a land of many natural splendours. Adding to its charm and appeal are the magnificent heritage architecture, colourful folk festivals, beautiful arts and crafts, traditional and contemporary music, theatre and films and delicious ethnic specialities that make West Bengal truly a brilliant experience offering unique diversities. It is located in the Indian subcontinent's Bengal region, bordering Bangladesh to the east and Nepal and Bhutan to the north. It also shares borders with Odisha, Jharkhand, Bihar, Sikkim, and Assam in India. Kolkata, India's third-largest metropolis and seventh-largest city by population, is the state capital. The Darjeeling Himalayan hill region, the Ganges delta, the Rarh region, and the coastal Sundarbans are all part of West Bengal. The Bengalis are the state's most populous ethnic group, with Bengali Hindus accounting for the bulk of the population. The region's early history was marked by a succession of Indian empires, internal strife, and a power struggle between Hinduism and Buddhism. Several significant Janapadas were located in ancient Bengal, with the earliest towns dating back to the Vedic period. The Vangas, Mauryans, and Guptas were among the ancient pan-Indian dynasties that ruled the region. The capital of the Gauda Kingdom, the Pala Empire, and the Sena Empire was the citadel of Gauda. Islam was first introduced through trade with the Abbasid Caliphate, but after Bakhtiyar Khalji's Ghurid conquests and the foundation of the Delhi Sultanate, the Muslim faith spread throughout Bengal.
